640	COMMERCIAL INTELLIGINGE.
	Hongkong, Thursday Evening. The Opium market has further declined today, in consequence of the Chinese who have been speculating in 7th sales finding that ú	they must clear the Drug to morrow, and there- by being forced to sell, threw upon the market above 100 chests Patna. This however, was promptly purchased by foreigners, and the market was thus saved from any uniterial decline. Towards evening a better feeling prevails.
	Patent opened this morning at $622). Ex- changes were also male against the Eight sales at a difference of $61 to 71 per chest. While such transactions were being carried on netive few days credit, and 3625, cash at which rates it closes firm, with an upward tendency. Heneres being in small stock, and in a few hands only, sales were effected in the morning at $625 and subsequently at $627); dealers making no difference in value between this and Patria. It closes firm with a fair impury.

Ä	S630 firm, and Malya $785 to $740 weak.  Husiness in the general market is quite inse tive and stagment. In Piece Goods there is nothing doing, and Raw Cotton, of which the natives have of late been buying very freely has been in only limited demand; a few dam aged goods placed ab auction realized a very fal- average price. Until these damaged calgoon markets for the last fortnight, are al disposed of and the stocks in native hands are reduced, any great activity here cannot be looked for. Beside the yer large quantity of goods that have been dispose of at anction, it must also be borne in mind the purchasers have been obliged to invariably pa sideration, executally to Chinaman A small damaged, placed at another to-day, realized as Grey Shirtings averaged $3.40. Further transactions are reported of 152 bales Bomba Cotton at $18.00 to $10.75 and 120 bale Tientein at $23.20. The movement in Production bridge 3,000 piculs Bridge Rige at $1.58 t

A Crown of Phorus.

Since we have undertaken the reform of our natitutions, every class seems to consider itself called upon to furnish a statement of its grievances. We have had inturnto commiserate the skilled and intelligent artisan, the unre- Sons & Ov. Possession can be taken on the cognized lodger, and the compound honscholder, lat of July next. now finally decomposed. Oppressed minorities have come with loud complaints to the feet of a puternal Legislature, and have been sent empty away; and women; bowing to the necessity of employing the interior agency of a male advo-cate, has pleaded in vain. What wonder, then. that the spirit of remoustrance, gendually asconding, should at last reach the higher orders of society, and reveal grievances hitherto concealed under the glitter of coronets and the roup of titles? We are men, and we think no. thing human alien from as, and so we will not refuse to the Peerage that compassionate consideration which we have extended to the woes

On Friday evening the House of Commons refreshed itself, after an abstract and metaphysical discussion on camulative voting, by a mahappy persons is well worthy of attention. Sir Colman O'Loghlon moved a Resolution that an address be presented to the Quoun, praying that she would make no more Ivisi Peers. The number of representative Irish Peers is twenty-eight; the number of Scotch representative Peers is sixteen. The Act of Union with Scotland forbade the creation of fresh Scotch peers, the Act of Union with Ireland limited the creation to one new Irish Peer for every three Lecrages which become extinct. A Scotch Poor is not permitted to sit in the House of Commons; an Irish Peer may not be elected by an Irish constituency. hat may, and often does, receive in England the hospitality denied him in his own country. The Sootch Peers have a very real and intell tible grievance. Tory politics predominate in the electing body, and therefore no Liberal Scotch Peer can hope to find his way into the House of Lords. He is absolutely forbidden to sit in the House of Commons, and therefore presents the singular anomaly of an English subject precluded by positive law from any pardelipation in public life, except on condition of adherence to a purticular set of political opinions. A Liberal Scotch Peer might havoull the eloquence and all the talents which have illustrated our most distinguished statesmon but his rank shuts him out of the House Commons, and his political opinions from the House of Lords. He is something more thandisfranchised, he is proscribed. A man who is neither a householder nor a lodger cannot vote for a member of Parliament, but there is nothing to prevent him being a member of Parliament himself, while to a Scotch Feer this path of ambition is entirely closed. The case is all the barder because the holders of titles subject. to this unjust exclusion bear some of the noblest historic names in the Peerage. We cannot imagine that such an anomaly would be allowed to continue if any serious effort were made for its correction, and we believe no objection would exist to opening the doors of one or other House of Legislature to the twentyone Scotch Peers who do not sit as the repri sentatives of their Order in the House of Lords The grievance of the Irish Poers is for Jose glaring. There are eighty-one Irish Peers who have no seats in the House of Lords. It nrged that these noblemen not being permitted to court the favour of Irish constituencies, and having lost their chance of seats in England and Scotland by the abolition of rotten boroughs. are virtually excluded from the Logislature. Such an argument, as was observed in the de- Position, Padder's Hill, with Commodious Rooms, bate, is not very complimentary to the Irish Boys' Room, Out Offices, &c. Apply to J. G., Poerage, for we know no reason which renders Office of this Paper. them so in welcome to English constituencies as to make their return impossible, except through the medium of a patron. Lord Palaforston io a distinguished instance to the contrary. These are, indeed, a number of Irish Pears who have no connexion with Irchard, and who therefore do not seem to come within the policy of the regulation which forbide them from sitting for Irish constituencies; but those who linve taken upon themselves a dignity connected with In-hand have no right to claim exemption from political disabilities connected with that dignity on the ground that they have nothing to do with the country in the Peerage of which they have been included. The question still remains whether it desirable to perpetuate these anomalies who ther, in the state of society at which we have

The question is a very wide one, and was hardly touched in the debate to which we have aliaded. How far is it wise in the present day to perpetuate hereditary! titles of mere personal distinction, entirely disnevered from any political duty or obligation? This was the rock on which the French nobility of the old regime split, but, in addition to the absence of all political functions, they enjoyed the invidious distinction of immunity from the payment of taxes. The subject is too large for neidental discussion, but we may observe that the tendency of all much honours to depreciation as society advances is certain and mevitable, The honour of Knighthood, which Queen Eliza | Storage in first class GRANITE GODOWNS | but not exceed | 6 ... 4 do. both thought sufficient reward for a life spent on moderate terms. in her service, would not now be accepted by any public man of distinction. The order of Baronets has suffered grievously at the hands of successive Ariministrations, and the Irish Peerage itself was only rescued, if rescuedit has been, from a similar fate by the clauses of the Treaty of Union, which | I of about 850 Tons capacity. Apply to put a check on the prerogative of the Orown. It is difficult to see what good purpose is answered by the oreation of new Irish Peers. It also de- Central Bank or Western India. Apply to serves consideration whether, in the present state of the House of Lords, the principle of representation is strictly applicable. Is there not comething anomalous in applying it to persons who hold their title not as the representatives of others, but simply by favour of the Crown? This is much to be regretted, when we bear in mind the minner in which he and his predecessors have behaved to Englishmen in Egypt at different times. A correspondent of the Times parrates how, on the recent visit of our Mediterranean fleet to Alexandria, he put the officers up at a magnificent place, and placed horses and carriages at their disposal, and, " without boring thom at all with a lot of State ceremony, he treated them just as if they were N various Parts of Hongkong.
